Contents and prep is already quite good, but some suggestions on the logistics:
Better equipment for working on a computer (conference chairs and especially round tables are usually not very adequate).
Combined tables for large tracks (rectangular tables would help with that)
More room for better acoustics and avoid tripping over bags etc.

Comments: It would have been helpful to have more information on what track scenarios other participants were testing/working on so I could have prepared my system differently or participated on another track.

Q5 Please share your suggestions for doing things better at the next FHIR Connectathon. If you would like us to follow up with you please include your contact information.

- Instead of having each track cover "New to the Connectathon" information in their prep calls, have a separate call just for new participants regardless of track. This would allow the track prep calls to focus on coordinating for the track and hopefully more will attend the track prep call.
- When people register for the Connectathon put the information in a spreadsheet or directly into ConMan. Distribute prior to the connectathon so that people can contact others to see what scenarios in the track they will be testing.

Comments: Since I was new to the FHIR Connectathon process I was trying to find info 'last minute' but that was mostly on me. However, there are many different websites that one needs to refer to for this, hl7.org, the confluence site, maybe another site for the specific signup and payment, etc. I would be helpful if this was all integrated/seemless.

Q5 Please share your suggestions for doing things better at the next FHIR Connectathon. If you would like us to follow up with you please include your contact information.

Better WiFi -- we had problems when folks were trying to download packages from github or docker. Basically the network did NOT perform well enough for a hackathon where people expect to be doing code development (not just browsing the Internet). Maybe some wired connections or a wired connection with HL7-managed WiFi (not hotel) would help?

In many cases one wants to communicate between server implementations and client implementations. A local network would be helpful. It is not possible to communicate with someone else's application on the hotel network. It is impossible to test rest hook subscriptions.

Some areas, eg Terminology & Profiling, strongly overlap with many others. It would be good to find a way to get better visibility & connections going on between these groups.

Q1 The HL7 FHIR Connectathon met my expectations.

☆ Disagree

Q2 Based on my experience, I would refer a colleague to come to an HL7 FHIR Connectathon.

☆ Slightly Agree

Q3 I will attend a future FHIR Connectathon.

☆ Slightly Agree

Why or why not?:

It wasn't clear to me that I needed to have attended many of the pre-meetings and come with a working relationship with a partner. I was expecting it to be more like a hackathon where you pitch you idea at the beginning, join a team and then demo at end of connectathon. I wish the webinar would have been recorded and broadcasted because Q4 I had the information I needed to be successful at the connectathon.

☆ Strongly Disagree

Comments:

It seemed very disorganized. All the resources seemed disjointed. Conman wasn't well utilized; Confluence was confusing and outdated. I needed a "Connectathon First Timers: Start Here" page. We had 4 ppl from my company go and we were all confused. Standards and HL7 is like 12th on our work priority list and don't have as much time to dedicate as other companies. You should clarify for attendees how many hours are expected to be put in before coming. You may also want to vet attendees better; it probably would have been better for my company to have had more training beforehand. We should have gone to Dev Days before attending a Connectathon. It would have been nice if the C-thon was at the end of the conference because we could have also leveraged all the training there. You'd probably also get better attendance at the end of your conference if the C-thon was at the end.
